Young Men Fight Over Old Feud—One Has Nose Broken.

CHURCH SERVICES TO-DAY

Chesterfield Young Lady Honored—Arrests Last Night.

Manchester Bureau, Times-Dispatch, No. 1102 Hull Street.

Dick Milton and Edgar Dobbin were arrested last night by Sergeant Wright for fighting. Some old grudge which they had fought over two years ago was revived, and the two young men proceeded to a final settlement of the trouble. During the fracas Milton's nose was broken and he was otherwise disfigured, and Dobbin's face was badly bruised.

The latter was put under bond, Mr. C. H. Myers going his bail, to appear in the Mayor's court to-morrow morning.

Church Services To-day.

Rev. R. M. Chandler, pastor, will conduct the services at Central Methodist Episcopal Church to-day. His subject in the morning will be "Faith, Hope, Charity," and at night "Strengthened With Might Within."

The morning service at West End Methodist Church will be conducted by the pastor, Dr. R. T. Wilson, presiding elder, will preach at 8 P. M. He will also conduct the third quarterly conference to-morrow night, beginning at 8 o'clock.

A rally meeting will be held by the Sunbeam Society in Clifton Street Church this afternoon. Special music will be rendered and recitations will be included in the programme. Services will be conducted at Sacred Heart Church by Father Kemp at 7 and 9 A. M. this morning.

Young Lady Honored.

Chesterfield county is about to lose one of its most accomplished and entertaining young ladies. Miss Mary Beverly Hancock has just been unanimously chosen by the official board of Burlington High School of North Carolina to take charge of the classes of history and Latin.

Miss Hancock is the accomplished daughter of the late Judge Beverly A. Hancock, of Chesterfield Circuit Court, and she enjoys the distinctive honors of being a full graduate of the Woman's College, of Richmond, Va., as well as that of Latin of Richmond College.

Personal and Briefs.

Miss Florence Moore, Miss Clara Lorer and Miss Sarah Redford returned from a party from a pleasant stay at Buckroe Beach.

Mrs. C. A. Tingle, of Hull Street, was slightly hurt by being thrown from her wagon on Main Street yesterday. Car No. 22 ran into the wagon, throwing the occupant out.

The families of Mrs. David P. Walke and Mrs. W. J. Carter are at Ocean View.

Messrs. Joe Milendorf and Kenney Smith have returned from their trip to Buffalo.

David Doley, drunk and down; Jennie Dudley and Mary Jones for fighting, were all arrested by Officer R. L. Jones last night.

There will be an important meeting of the Olympia Club Tuesday night to decide on a date for their annual outing.

Mr. Logan Allen, of Lawrence, S. C., is visiting his brother, Mr. W. M. Allen, superintendent of the Alms House.

Mrs. Merchant and Mrs. W. Hugh Owen of Twelfth and Porter Street, will leave to-day on a visit to Virginia Beach.

Mr. S. C. Taylor and his son, H. Ingram Taylor, have returned from a two weeks' stay in Mississippi.

The speaker dwelt at length upon the bill, how it originated and what it had done for the State, and again remarked that the positions of Swanson and Willard in regard to this bill had never been made plain. He went on to say that he has always favored and still favored the "Jim Crow" street car, and months before Mr. Swanson announced his platform, and if any copying has been done, I haven't done it.

The Mann Bill.

The speaker dwelt at length upon the Mann bill, how it originated and what it had done for the State, and again remarked that the positions of Swanson and Willard in regard to this bill had never been made plain. He went on to say that he has always favored and still favored the "Jim Crow" street car, and months before Mr. Swanson announced his platform, and if any copying has been done, I haven't done it.

Willard in PULASKI.

Speaks to Small But Enthusiastic Gathering.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

PULASKI, Va., July 15.—Lieutenant-Governor Joseph E. Willard delivered an address in the Opera House here this afternoon to a small but enthusiastic gathering. Music was furnished by the Italian orchestra. The speaker was introduced by A. T. Eskridge, Jr., who referred to the fact that Mr. Willard's mother was not only a Virginian, but was the only woman who was a commissioned officer in the Confederate army, and had been taken as a prisoner of war and refused to take the oath of allegiance in order to secure her release.

Willard's audience was made up of very representative citizens from all over the county. He is not generally known to the citizens here, but the Virginia Military Institute alumni, of whom this country has a large number, were out in force, and gave him a royal greeting. He took up his record, his reputation and his fitness. As to his record, he said if any man could charge against him he would at once lay down his aspirations to be Governor. As to his reputation, he said: "If any man here would not like to have money, let us hear from him. I have a considerable portion of this world's goods, but I am here in this presence to state that not one dollar of it was acquired wrongfully; not one cent of it is stained with a widow's tears." Concerning platforms, he stated that no candidate could make an especial claim in that regard; that platforms were made by the people, and the candidates found out what the people wanted and got on the band wagon by attaching a blue print stamp: "I am in favor of the single list."

Concerning roads he said that a large number of those in Virginia were so badly laid out that an engineer backed by the treasury of the United States could not keep them in repair, and that until the roads were improved, the idea of hauling pupils of the public schools to and from centrally located high schools would have to be abandoned, because with roads as at present the trip could not be made to and fro in a day.

He favored better primary schools, better school houses and better pay for teachers, and the working of convicts on the public roads, and gave as his platform, in brief, a square deal for every man, and the progress of the State.

The speech was well received and evoked frequent applause.

ment of, by and for friends. There are plenty of places in life for friendships. Like other virtues, men who have it don't continually talk about it. The people who make professions of standing by friends are the Quays, the Hannans, the Rathbones and the Crokers, who would stick you in the back if they got a chance.

"I am appealing directly to the people in this fight. I have no congressmen following my head, and I have no party back and call. I have no secretary of the State Committee running my campaign and giving me the names of party workers; furnishing me with the doubtful ones, who should be looked after.

An Honest Vote.

"All I ask is an honest vote, honestly counted. I expect to have this, and, having it, I do not look forward with dread to the result.

"I submit that the junior senator has not done enough to warrant eighteen years in the Senate, and a little new blood in that body from Virginia won't hurt even if the new blood be not quite so good as the old."

"You've got the people with you," yelled some one in the crowd.

"That's my heart's desire," was the Governor's quick reply, followed by a cry of applause, and if I have them, I trust I shall have the courage never to disappoint them.

"The junior senator says I hold myself as great as Leigh and Hunter. I deny this, but I do have the temerity to say I will look up and not down for my standard."

"Policy of Surprises."

After discussing the question of experience and declaring that Mr. Martin was both unknown and inexperienced when first elected, the Governor said: "I don't care how good a senator he has made, I don't believe it proper for the party to commit itself to such a policy of surprises."

"The saving grace of the Democratic party is out in the open, and no secrets from the people."

The Governor was about to conclude here when there were loud cries of "Go on," "Go on" and "To-morrow is Sunday."

"If I go to the Senate," said the Governor, in conclusion, "I will go unbound of foot and untied of hand."

"I am in the struggle of my life for what I believe to be right, and if, after all, I will hear your voice by day and by night. I will render public service first and personal service next."

"I thank you most cordially and leave my candidacy and the principles for which I contend to your hands."

There was an informal reception on the stage when the Governor concluded, and scores of Democrats went up and shook his hand in congratulation.
